Financier George H. Pell's bank levying operations had considerably more light thrown upon them to-day in General Sessions, where he is being tried for stealing $31,000 worth of the Lenox Hill Bank's

Philip L. Meyer, who, at the time Sim mons and Pell got hold of the Lenox Hill Bank, was put in as one of the syndicate Board of Directors, testified that in December last he had loaned Pell large sums of money for the account of Simmons. "I used to lend him sums as high a $15,000 at a time, and he would pay them back the next day. I always used to have a ettlement att the end of each day.

"In December I had accounts in three different banks, two in the Bank of Deposit, two in the Equitable and one in the Lenox Hill."

Mr. Meyer said he had a good deal to do with the buying of the Lenox Hill Bank and balance of our account, for he owed me #13,000 that day. Fell agreed to this. "I gave him two checks of J. F. Mead & Co. as gregating about #15,000". These two checks were for #8,400 and #7,000 respectively payable to P. L. Meyer, and each indorsed by Meyer and George H. Fell, Agent. Cashier Gardiner testified, in answer to Mr. Newcombe's question, that a great many banks overcertified checks every day for depositors.

"I cau't help that," said Gardiner.

"They all do it. Sometimes they write accorded instead of 'certified' across the check, but the banks treat them just the same as certifications.

On cross-examination Mr. Meyer said the thirty-one bonds realized $29,405.

Handolph Rodman, cashier for Sheldon & Co., gave a list of the bonds.

Cashier Gardiner, of the St. Nicholas Bank, then detailed the story of Fell's big paper account in that bank.

Inquiry as to the method of investigating the characters of applicants for licenses drew out that the Board depended largely on what the newspapers had said about the place and the applicant, and a scrap book was shown containing clippings from the press regarding saloon and restaurant keepers.

When there is a complaint sgainst a piace or a protest against the granting of a new liceuse it is addressed verbally or in writing to the Board of Excise, and is entered in books for that purpose by the Becretary. Some of them are local, by one or two neighbors, or they are from all the residents of a block or are general, covering a precinct or several blocks. Other general protests are not against any individual or place, but avainst the issue of any license in a given district. Father Taylor and the Paulist Fathers protested against the granting of any license in their parishes extending from the Park to the North River and from Thirty-seventh street to Seventy-fifth street. Returning to the consideration of the black list, "the witness said that licenses had been issued this year to the Nilver Grill and Prospect Garden to sell as restaurants at tables, the Gridiron and Emrich's Assembly Rooms. "What is a general inspection? Is it a police inspection?" asked Mr. Ivins.

What is a general inspection? Is it a police inspection?" asked Mr. Ivins.

BLANING THE POLICE.

'No, sir. It is made to ascertain if our books are correct. The inspector makes no inquiry as to the moral character of the applicant or his record. The Board is not responsible until such time as a complaint has been made."

"Who is responsible?"

"The Police Department."

"Is it the practice of the Board of Excise to make frequent inspection and to keep a sort of supervision over liceused places."

"No, sir; we are not equipped for such work. The supervision of the liquor business is the duty of the Police Department and the Criminal Courts. When an application has been rejected or a license revoked we notify the applicant or licensee and also send notice to the Police Department that that place is unicensed."

It was elicited that the Excise Inspector had no lawful power to compel occupants of buildings in which an applicant for license hout their business or character, and "building" is construed by the Excise Board to apply only to that portion of the building occupied by the licensee himself.
